Professional Code (R.S.Q., c. C-36):

59.2. No professional may engage in an act derogatory to the honour or dignity of his profession or to the discipline of the members of the order, or practise a profession, carry on a trade, enterprise or business or hold an office or function that is inconsistent with the honour, dignity or practice of his profession.

Code of Ethics of Engineers (R.R.Q. 1981, c. I-9, r. 6):

3.02.01. An engineer must fulfill his professional obligations with integrity.

3.02.08. An engineer shall not resort nor lend himself to nor tolerate dishonest or doubtful practices in the performance of his professional activities.

3.05.03. An engineer must safeguard his professional independence at all times and avoid any situation which would put him in conflict of interest.

4.02.03. An engineer shall not abuse a colleague's good faith, be guilty of breach of trust or be disloyal towards him or willfully damage his reputation. Without restricting the generality of the foregoing, the engineer shall not, in particular:

[...]

(c) induce a colleague to commit an offence against the laws and regulations governing the practice of the profession.
